Description

Honeychurch Wood forms part of a larger area of woodland and meadow nestled between the nearby village of Winkleigh and the closer village of Broadwoodkelly. Both villages have names that reflect the importance of the history of woodland in this part of Devon - Winkleigh takes its name from two Saxon words - 'wincel' meaning 'corner' and 'leah' meaning 'clearing in a forest' while Broadwoodkelly takes part of its name from the Kelly family who held the local manor.

Honeychurch Wood was most likely planted sometime in the 1960's and has since thrived in the fertile soil to form a glorious woodland. Running along the western boundary is a fast flowing clear stream. This arises from a nearby spring which eventually joins the river Okement near the village of Jacobstowe.

The topography of the woodland is favourable and generally level.

The woodland takes its name from the local village of Honeychurch which hosts the impressive Honeychurch Church of St Mary. The nave and chancel of the church are Norman while the tower and porch were added in the 15th century. It is thought that this replaced an earlier Saxon church built by a local Lord called 'Huna', hence the name Honeychurch.

The purchasers of the meadow will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Trees

A traditional woodland structure of 'coppice with standards', the main canopy consists of well spaced tall oak trees with other broadleaved trees such as birch, willow and ash. The lower canopy, or 'understorey' is mainly hazel which would have been coppiced in the past to make wood products such as thatching spars and hurdles to use as mobile 'pens' for livestock.

Wildlife

The rich mosaic of diverse woodland, lush meadow and the stream provide an excellent habitat for flora and fauna. Within the woodland area numerous species of birds frequent the peaceful surroundings, these include tawny owls, tree creepers, long tailed tits, jays and robins.

Red deer are commonly seen in the local area and the woodland as well as signs and tracks of badger and foxes.

At the east of the woodland an open meadow area attracts a number of species of butterfly including the ringlet and speckled wood.

Features

Along the western boundary is a stream that flows from south to north.

There is a bench within a clearing where family picnics can be enjoyed or a more peaceful time spent observing the local wildlife.

Old hedge banks define the boundaries of Honeychurch Wood and are shown on maps from the late 1800's.

Access, tracks and footpaths

Access to Honeychurch Wood is via a gateway from the A3124 - there is a coded padlock. Please contact Stuart on 07801 789215 for the code prior to visiting to allow you to drive to the woodland entrance.

A shared stone track takes you to a shared stoned parking area for Honeychurch Wood. This allows year round access for all types of vehicle. From here a track over the meadow provides access to the meadow area and woodland. This is best used during the drier months.

There are no public footpaths within the woodland or meadow.

Rights and covenants

The purchasers of the meadow will be asked to enter into a covenant to ensure the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of adjoining woodlands and meadows.

Activities

Honeychurch Wood is perfectly placed for wildlife and conservation enjoyment along with recreational activities such as occasional overnight stays, camp fires and family days out.

Or perhaps a morning or afternoon of relaxation using the principles of forest bathing, known in Japan as 'shinrin yoku' which is a method of being calm and quiet amongst the trees whilst taking slow, deep breaths.

The meadow area is great for camping and can be maintained as a wildflower meadow or used for planting and growing of trees and produce.

Local area and history

Honeychurch Wood is located in the rural heartland of Devon where numerous farms and small villages hark back to a simpler historical existence in this beautiful countryside. The local village of Broadwoodkelly is one such charming place, originally one of the estates of Lord John Thynne, Sub- Dean of Westminster Abbey.

Nearby Hallows Church is located within the village and mostly dates back to the 15th century, though parts of the church are 200 years older, the church boasts an impressive stained glass window in the north wall with ancient blue and yellow glass.

A short distance away is Winkleigh, a village steeped in history with remains of 12th century castles and an old airfield that played an important role in the Second World War. It was named the best place in England & Wales to raise children in a report from 2011.

Although set in the heart of the county, access to the north Devon coast is within easy reach - 45 minutes to Westward Ho! and under an hour to Bude.

Directions

It is best to contact the agent prior to visiting to get the gate code so you can access the site.

- Take the A3124 south from the village of Winkleigh in the direction of North Tawton.
- After 1 mile stay on the A3124, passing the turn to Broadwoodkelly on your right, then Coulson Cross on your left and you will see the entrance gate to Honeychurch Wood shortly after on your right, just before the 'woodlands for sale' sign above the hedge.
- You can use the gate code to open the gate (please shut and lock the gate behind you and when you leave) and then head down the stoned track until you come to a stoned parking area on your left at the end of the track. Park here to view.
- Looking south there is a track over the field defined by fence posts on each side. Walk along this track until you come to a meadow area with the 'Honeychurch Wood' name sign defining the entrance. Here you can explore the meadow area and also turn right along the shared access track leading through an old gateway into the woodland part of the land.
- Once through the old gate way you will see a path into the woods on the left allowing access into the woodland part of Honeychurch Wood.

- From the south join the A3124 near North Tawton heading north in the direction of Winkleigh.

- Stay on the A3124 for 3 miles, passing Cadditon Cross and looking out for a double 'woodlands for sale' sign on your right where shortly after you will find the entrance gate to Honeychurch Wood.
- Follow the access arrangements via the gate as above.

Sat Nav / GPS note: The post code EX20 2AR is for the point shown on the location map by the red dot.
